Improving appearance sophomore Janet Hansen takes time to comb hair between classes.

HHSers divided into a wide span of economic categories. Brackets ranged from the affluent to the deprived. Social distinctions included the elite, social climbers, Mr. Average American, and the culturally lacking. Racial and ethnic background for HHSers matched those of the nation. Faiths and religions showed diversity as did student levels of interest in scholastic achievements.

Making substitutions, coach Dick Barr briefs junior Dennis Jarrett on offense game strategy.

Among the masses, HHSers felt the security of their world. Classes began and classes ended; students and faculty functioned in their tiny world. HHSers carried with them the characteristics of their countrymen, neighbors and peers. Economically, socially, culturally, historically, and scholastically, HHSers evolved with the year always within perspective of their MICROCOSM.

Cheerbloc members watch game with intent hope.

Features

Students view programs; faculty performs comedy

HHSers, along with other Hammond middle and high school students, had the opportunity to view the performances of visiting professional and amateur artists.

Performances, given every Thursday on alternating lunch hours, consisted of poetry reading, musical duets, rock bands, films and modern dance.

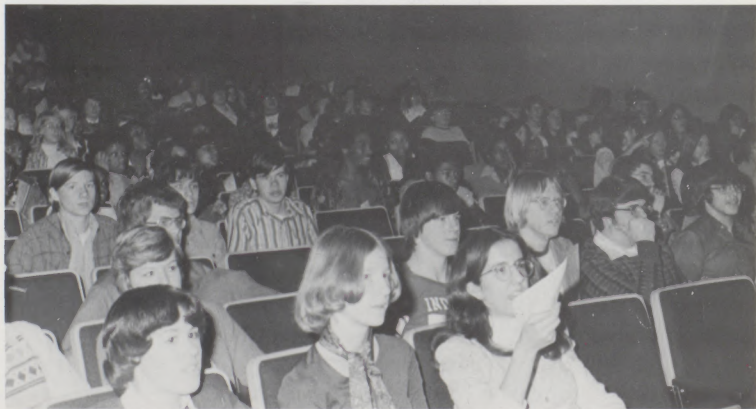

Grants from the Title VII program funded Lunch Time Theater Series for Hammond and Evansville. The two towns qualified for money because of the diverse economic, racial and social backgrounds present in their schools.

HHS faculty members Mr. and Mrs. Robert Urick, Miss Wendy Slipcheck, Miss Mary Rodgers, Mr. Frank Carroll, Mr. Dan Candiano, Mrs. Jackie Buss, Mrs. Sally Woodrick, Mr. Leroy Harwell, Mr. Tom Schwartz, Mr. Mike Fendley and Mrs. Mary Robison presented the comedy "How to Propose" in the HHS auditorium Feb. 6th.

Earning spending money, Bryan Vaux holds down a part-time job stocking cases at a local store.

HHSers plan, participate in social life endeavors

Social life action for HHSers began at 3:25 when students began to make plans for the evening's activities.

Whether HHSers gathered at friend's homes for parties, attended basketball or football games, or went to the movies, they could be seen socializing with others.

Campus Life meetings, concerts in Chicago, pizza after the games, school sponsored activities and weekend parties served as reasons for social gatherings.

Brooks House, YMCA, YWCA, local school gyms and Civic Center provided students with facilities for recreational activities. They also sponsored several social activities.

After school, sophomores gather at a friend's house to discuss occurrences of the day.

Practicing scuba diving skills, junior David Frew emerges from the water to rest.

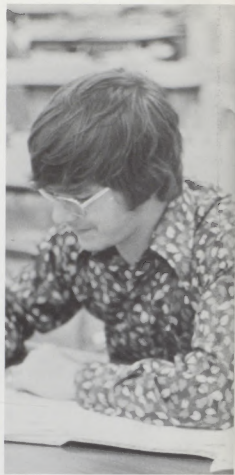

After-school activities bring Hammond High students to Brooks House for fun and relaxation.

Standing by front window, freshman girls gaze out at outside activities during lunch hour.

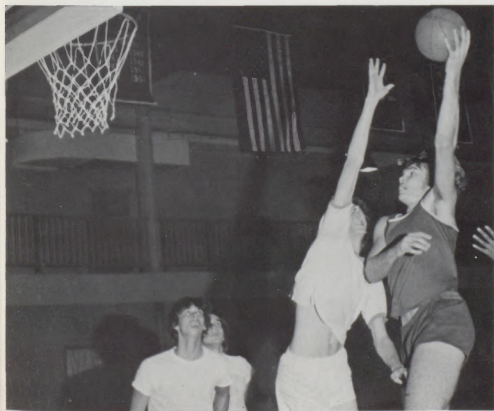

Student life remains constant

Besides the usual amount of studying, books, homework and tests, HHSers experience moments of liveliness in their school day.

Auditorium sessions, club periods, field trips, pep sessions and lunch hours all aided in the reduction of student boredom.

P.A. announcements, green slips, copying homework, debating with counselors, visiting Dean Barr, receiving salutations from Dr. Feuerbach, cafeteria food and low study hall attendance remained ever-present in student life.

Still, faculty and administration felt it necessary to remind HHSers of the principal purpose of school — education — and urged students to act accordingly.

Athletic practices for 10 varsity sports played an important part in school life for many HHSers.

During study hall, sophomore Terra Barge uses HHS library to catch up on homework.

Events

Association Week began in the first week of May and included traditional activities such as the Mr. Legs Contest and tricycle race.

The 2nd annual Talent Show consisted of dance routines and a variety of other talents.

Mini-courses finally became reality after weeks of planning students' schedules. Courses ranged from theology to sex education. The courses lasted 3 days with three 1½ hour classes and a 1½ hour lunch.

Mini-courses sponsored many activities such as guitar lessons which Juniors Phil Renfro, Leroy Lindsay and Richard Burg took part in.

Senior Noreen VanNatta sings a medley of Carpenters' hit songs.

Showing form in modern dance, Ann Fielder interprets "Love Child."

Experiment concerning reflection from a plane mirror causes PSSC student junior Bob Kaminsky to adjust object.

Observing ripple tank waves, senior Claire Ventimiglia interprets findings.

HHSers attend science lectures, learn in labs

After fulfillment of required biology and health and safety courses, many HHSers ventured on to physics and chemistry.

Physics and chemistry students alternated days of classroom discussion with laboratory experiments. Labs introduced students to various methods of research techniques and equipment used by scientists.

Several midwestern universities extended open invitations to HHS students enrolled in physics and chemistry classes.

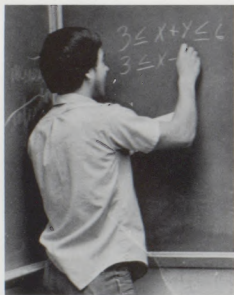

Physics students, along with Mr. Lawrence Lundgren, visited Aragon Labs in spring.

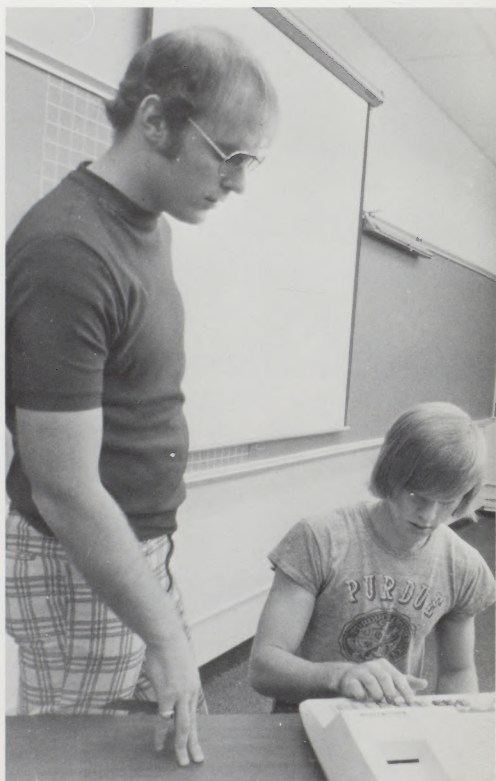

Slides provide freshman Valerie Banks opportunity to use microscope.

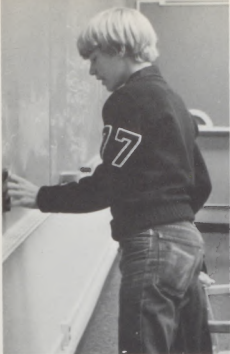

Physics Lab Assistant — Karl Schwartz.

Showing his work in Algebra Trig, Pete Sakelaris proves his answer.

Prior to use, Mr. James Ruf instructs Dan Mazur on computer operation.

Correcting proof, sophomore Bob Mitchell erases last step.

Department purchases computer, adds new course.

Purchase of a programmable calculator computer enabled math department to add a computer course to its program (2nd) semester.

Students found offered math courses flexible. Levels ranged from basic math to advanced math analysis.

Math department teachers administered National Math Examination to all interested HHSers.

Working with his algebra class, Mr. Bob Urlick explains problem.

During Geometry I class, Mary Kaye Hauter studies basics of protractor.

Linguists develop oral, written skills

Rehearsing for French Festival, juniors Maureen Malloy and JoAnne Grant repeat lines.

Stringing beads for German class party, sophomore Tina Plinski makes ornament.

With Christmas on the way, students conclude party in Mr. Tom Schwartz's German class.

Foreign Language Department offered HHS students opportunities to develop verbal and written skills in French, Spanish and German.

Films, magazines and paperback books aided students in developing skills, as well as stimulated interest in the language.

Classes listened to tapes in language lab with the objective of improving listening and pronunciation skills.

Indiana University Honors

Program provided students with a chance to earn trips to Germany, France and Mexico.

French classes participated in Festival du Français given at Spohn Middle School.

Commercial students practice skills

Aspiring clerks, typists and secretaries enrolled in business-oriented courses offered at HHS.

General business, typing, shorthand, clerical practice, business management and business law rounded out courses included in HHS curriculum.

With the intention of exposing students to practical business and secretarial skills, students were able to enroll as a business student.

Computing data, senior Evelyn Smith concentrates during Clerical Practice.

Correcting mistakes, Synde Rich pauses during Typing II class.

Completing assignment, seniors Sandy Galloway and Alma Saurez add figures.

In Clerical Practice, seniors use electronic printing calculators.

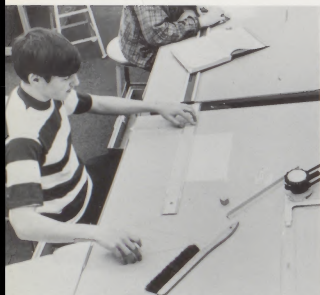

Checking data on financial report, senior girls check for accuracy.

Before handing in her typing paper, Valerie Watkins checks for errors.

Working with adding machine, Melodee Ryan checks accuracy of final figures.

Measuring distance, junior Dean Mosca prepares to strike angle.

Placing pattern on material, sophomore Bridgette Sanders matches the grain, while Debra Rancifer watches.

Working in woods class, junior Dan Kuiper planes a board for next project.

Turning starter wheel, senior Hattie Bailey feeds material to machine.

HHSers enroll in practical arts classes

Wishing to familiarize themselves with home economics and industrial skills, HHS students chose electives accordingly.

Industrial arts classes made it possible for students to design and build projects.

HHSers learned practical and economical skills in cooking and sewing courses.

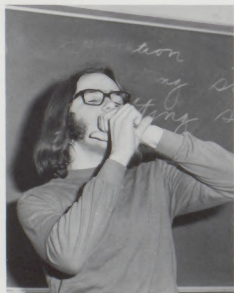

After laying out pattern, sophomore Theresa Jones checks instructions.

With brother Howard, senior Laurie Sherman practices new acting technique in drama.

Making costumes for next play, junior Dennis Jarrett sews pants before dress rehearsal.

Performing original comedy, Bill Lawvere adjusts a "hoogalator with his zorphyte."

Juniors compose Dunes staff, adopt modern book style

Composed of junior editorial staff, Dunes journalists modernized yearbook design and style.

Three months later, '74 Dunes gave '75 Dunes staff the initiative to produce an on-time '75 edition of the Dunes.

Staffers spent lunch hours, 5th hour, 7th hour and after school to meet final deadline of 192 pages by March 5.

Nine staffers and adviser Mr. William Slivka journeyed to University of Notre Dame Sept. 20 to attend a one day seminar. Staffers learned lay-out design, business approaches and photography techniques.

Tallying yearbook sales, junior Teresa Merch adds 2 Dunes sales.

Totaling money from Dunes sales, Monica Parker counts out change.

Working with comparably small and inexperienced staff, Herald journalists gained knowledge as year progressed.

HHS staffers strived to maintain high quality and workmanship of Herald which earned All-American rating for eight previous years.

HHS school news appeared every Friday in The Times weekly column "Calumet Region Youth," a change from its bi-weekly appearance in previous years.

HHers learn techniques, join staffs

Journalism offered students a chance to learn newspaper, yearbook techniques, and join staffs at end of semester.

Studying workings of publications, journalism students prepared themselves for future staff positions.

Finishing newsbrief, sophomore Eric Huebner removes typed story from typewriter.

Aiding Herald staffers, journalism student junior Gayle Pavlovick counts newspapers.

Setting timer for enlarger, photographer Tom Klassen works at Bodie studio.

Dunes staff learns Bodie techniques

Bodie studios shot senior photos and provided pictures for '75 Dunes. School photographers were trained in photography and printing techniques.

Adjusting printing machinery, student photographer Teresa Cunningham uses Bodie dark room.

HHSers gain honors, earn scholarships

Different organizations accepted exceptional students into various honor groups.

Valedictorian and Salutatorian were selected for scholastic achievements after 7 semesters of school.

National Honor Society members had to maintain at least a 3.0 grade average throughout the four years.

DAR, Betty Crocker and National Merit Winners were selected by faculty members or by test scores.

National Merit Winners — BOTTOM: Bill Lawvere. BACK ROW: Steve Weiland, Steve Cornwell, Bob Morrison.

Valedictorian (right) and Salutatorian — Claire Ventimiglia, Steve Weiland.

Juniors set leadership precedents

Raising funds for spring prom kept junior class busy sponsoring car washes, bake sales and recreation nights in the gym.

College-bound juniors took the NMSQT/PSAT October 28 to evaluate themselves in comparison to national standards.

Banding together, junior class produced homecoming float, "A Winner Every Time," which placed 2nd in parade competition.

For the first time members of the junior class were able to run for elected offices in Association.

Sophomores gain new status, attain 2nd year mannerisms

Sophomores climbed the HHS social ladder simply by advancing one grade and, more importantly, by shedding some freshman characteristics.

As sophomores familiarized themselves with HHS traditions and events, they became more involved in school activities. Sophomores, along with their class sponsors and officers, planned spring events and ordered class rings.

78ers set enrollment mark

Even though class of 78 had the distinction of being the largest freshman class in the last 10 years, they functioned the same as all preceding freshman classes.

Freshmen elected their class officers early in the school year to organize and plan events for their class.

As the newness of high school life wore off, freshmen settled back to looking, listening and contributing.

Hammond High Wildcats began "Hoosier Hysteria" as the state's no. 1 ranked basketball team.

Cats coasted by Clark Pioneers in 1st sectional game, 60-36. Championship game matched "Big Purple" against neighboring rival Tech Tigers. Cats raced to 20 point half-time edge and shook off 3rd and 4th quarter scares to win 3rd straight sectional crown, 79-74.

Regional action pitted Cats against 17th ranked East Chicago Washington. Roundballers advanced to final game by besting Senators 76-72 in a double-overtime squeaker. Sixth ranked Gary Emerson thwarted Cats' chance for semi-state play as Golden Tornadoes passed coach Dick Barr's team in a 72-71 heartbreaker.

Senior Brian Banks and Rich Valavicius were selected to the Times first "All Sectional" team. Times named seniors John Randall, Ronald Mercer and junior Richie Hudson to 2nd "All Sectional" team.

Regional performance earned Banks Times first "All Regional" team honors, while Valavicius and Randall grabbed 2nd team distinctions.

The Decay of Integrity

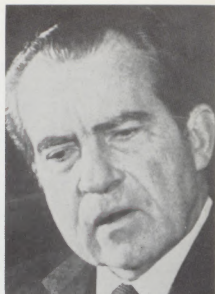

In a long, drawn-out process, the world watched as a man whom we wholeheartedly supported for the office of President stepped down from the office in an unprecedented resignation.

With the spring of 1974 bearing the indictments of many of President Richard Nixon's chief advisers and aides and also the release of the controversial White House Tapes, the public sat for a long summer of witnessing the House Judiciary Committee's investigation on television.

Mounting evidence and failing support forced Nixon to resign in a speech before the Nation, August 8, 1974.

Nearly dying from an attack of phlebitis, the broken ex-President retired to his San Clemente estate where he remains in seclusion.

Now out of the news, the Watergate trial continues its slow imperfect process in Judge John Sirica's courtroom. With twenty-six politicians now convicted, the main question may never be answered: was pardoned former President Nixon guilty?

CIA Spying

Amidst the Watergate scandal erupted the investigation of the CIA. Charges were made that due process of law was ignored when evidence was gathered to disprove Daniel Ellsberg's Watergate testimony.

Further investigation proved the CIA, contrary to its charter, was conducting domestic spying and involved in the overthrow of Chile's Marxist President Salvadore Allende.

Energy Crisis

Because of a 30% cut of oil producing capabilities by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), the U.S. continued its program to supply its energy needs.

Taxes on gas were proposed in order to curb the consumption of the commodity. Among the plans proposed was a $3 per barrel tariff on imported oil. Another plan called for a 1¢ per gallon retail tax.

Long term solution to the energy problem continued to be nuclear energy. President Ford called for 200 working reactors "on-line" by 1985; however environmentalists protested about the lack of concern for the environment. Questioning government foresight, ecologists warned of nuclear leaks and wondered what would be done with nuclear waste.

Misc.

Conflict continued in the Mid-East between the Arabs and Israelites.

President Gerald Ford and Vice President Nelson Rockefeller combined to be the first non-elected two top officials in the land.

Hammond School Superintendent Dr. Wayne Carle resigned.

Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago won the Democratic party nomination for an unprecedented 6th time.

Economy

Fearing the possibilities of the future, U.S. citizens found themselves in a deepening recession. Unemployment rose to a 34 year high of 8.2% while inflation rose at a slightly higher pace.

Government programs seemed to do little, so business and the individuals joined together to combat the problem. Pay cuts, shorter work weeks and rebates were contributions to help curb a worsening economy.

Unemployment forced the numbers of welfare recipients to increase drastically. Rising food stamp prices hindered the buying power of some 17.1 million welfare people.

With summer approaching, layoffs continued, thus, making the prediction of a 10% unemployment rate plausible.

Sports

Eying a national collegiate record, Indiana University's basketball team surpassed the 32 consecutive game winning streak set by Ohio State in its 1960-61.

Fighting in Zaire, Africa, contender Muhammad Ali defeated heavyweight champ George Foreman.

Earning close to $7.5 million, Evel Knievel attempted but failed his "jump" over the Snake River Canyon.

Winning $285,400 in 1974, Jimmy Connors became the highest paid tennis pro.

Failing in their 2nd attempt in as many years, Minnesota lost to Pittsburgh in the Super Bowl.

After another disappointing season, Jack Pardee replaced Abe Gibron as head coach of the Chicago Bears.

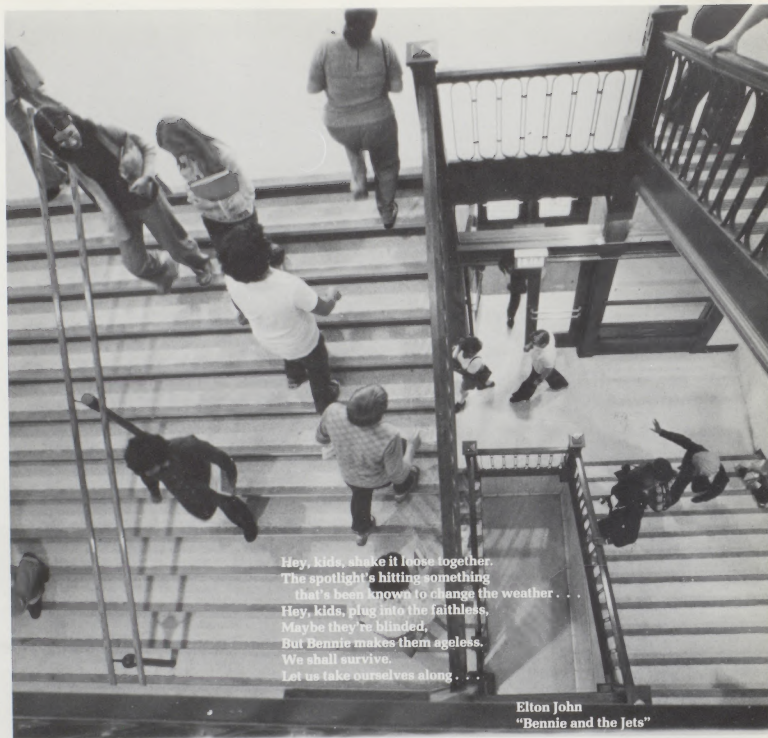

Troubled by lacking funds, some World Football League teams were forced into bankruptcy.

Qualifying for the U.S. Olympic team, Dwight Stones broke a 12 year old world record by clearing 7'5 1/2" in the high jump.

Finding the weather "too cold" in Portland, basketball standard Bill Walton continued having trouble with the Portland Trailblazers.

O. J. Simpson and Mary Jo Peppeler won in their respective Superstar competitions.

Hey, kids, shake it loose together.
The spotlight's hitting something that's been known to change the weather . . .
Hey, kids, plug into the faithless,
Maybe they're blinded,
But Bennie makes them ageless.
We shall survive.
Let us take ourselves along . . .
